A Rum Fellow has opened its first London showroom at 60 Golborne Road, nestled at the end of Portobello Road. This new space arranged over two floors displays the studio's artisan textiles, handcrafted rugs and bespoke upholstered pieces vibrant with colour and intricate pattern.

“Our new showroom is a space to inspire creativity and a place to connect with the magic of handcrafted rugs and textiles. We believe it will serve as the perfect starting point for interior projects, informing and inspiring designers and clients on the creative journey to achieving stunning interiors.”

Hand-woven brocades, stripes, and falserias, hand-printed cottons, flat weave, tufted and knotted rugs - all are vibrant with personality and history. New collections on show include Pepenado and additional colourways of Holmul an intricate pattern woven on a treadle loom by Maya master weavers. Recent rugs include the Ocular and Periscope rug weaving familiar narratives into fresh contemporary designs.

Whether bought from the roll, or commissioned, everything A Rum Fellow produces needs to be seen and touched to appreciate its individuality. The new showroom has created a space to experience and enjoy the collections first-hand in a place that is now go-to design destination for interior designers and textile hunters alike.
