

COX LONDON LOUNGE AT COLLECT
INTERNATIONAL CONTEMPORARY CRAFT & ART FAIR
SOMERSET HOUSE LONDON, 3 - 5 MARCH 2023

Cox London, VIP Lounge Partner

Cox London have built a reputation for creating elemental and remarkable pieces of lighting, furniture, and artworks. Everything Chris and Nicola Cox design is handmade in their own studio, workshops and bronze foundry in London, making Collect the perfect platform, and the VIP room at Somerset house the ultimate showcase, for their unique brand of interior landscaping.

Chris Cox, creative director comments:

"At Cox London, we are foremost artists and makers and so have a true affinity with Collect. From the handmade, soul-nourishing work it showcases, to the extraordinary artisans it celebrates. To partner with Collect is the most natural alliance. For two years we have been working with our in-house team of artisans, to create new pieces specially for Collect 2023."

The lounge at Somerset House will be an immersive woodland setting creating a rich narrative for the new interior artworks. Each one-off or limited-edition piece shines a light on the power of craft and the energy of the maker's hands. The stage is set to be a flamboyant space showing off the best of Cox London craft for Collect 2023.

There are recurring nature themes in their work. Major new pieces are the Queen of Night chandelier running the whole length of the room. Burr wood realised as two grand consoles take root on the ground. It is rare to find walnut burr on this scale with such an extraordinary surface texture.

Here is a special preview of the new work:

Queen of the Night is a free-form sculptural light, that the Cox's have been working on since April this year. The idea, as with most Cox designs began with a hand drawing by Christopher and Nicola in their studio. The image shows a beautiful interpretation from this drawing, an initial prototype raised by expert craftsman in their workshops, located next door to their studio. The actual piece, a wild vine-like composition, at approx. 26 feet long (8 metres) will ramble the entire length of the lounge. Each leaf has been individually hand-forged and soldered into languid groups that punctuate wildly meandering stems and tendrils. This dark yet beguiling design will be lit and lifted with gently flickering candles and rare floral appearances. The Queen of the Night is a species of cactus which rarely blooms and only at night. This work also refers to an Aria sung by the Queen of the Night in the second act of Mozart's Magic flute. Dark but beautiful, beguiling, winding, rambling, free ranging this chandelier is Cox London's aria of virtuoso forging, welding, soldering and hand finishing. Each piece commissioned going forwards will be a unique version, site specific for each project.

Folly furniture such as the sofas and armchairs are also the result of many months work: sculpture meets decorative arts meets high comfort lounge seating.

Burr Consoles will be cast in pure white Jesmonite and the Bronze Wisteria Vine mirrors will be spectacular sculptural mirrors adorning the piers. Generously proportioned, hand metal work floral displays will sit in the windows.

"Since founding Cox London we've found ourselves increasingly drawn to a very particular aesthetic and-one centred on the orders and design of the natural world. We strive to unlock the nature within every piece we create and illuminate and animate the spaces they inhabit."
